

Rabbi Baruch Frankel was born and raised in London, UK, where he attended local schools before dedicating 12 years to advanced Jewish studies in Gateshead and Jerusalem. There, he received Semicha from Rabbi Yitzchok Berkowitz and earned a Master's Degree in Jewish Education.

Raised in families deeply involved in education and community work, Rabbi Frankel and his wife, Shani, inherited both a sense of joy and responsibility for serving the Jewish people. Their journey led them first to Buffalo, NY in 2015, and most recently, Rockville, MD, where they devoted six years to building and serving the local Jewish community.

Rabbi Frankel is an experienced public speaker and educator, known for his warm and approachable manner. He enjoys connecting with people of all ages and backgrounds and is passionate about his life's mission: to use his skills, experience, and engaging personality to inspire and guide others in their Jewish growth. An avid traveller who has visited nearly thirty countries, a keen sports enthusiast, and creatively inclined, Rabbi Frankel lives by the motto, "Life is a onetime offer—use it well!"
